

Job – Lawyer – Top Firm

Growing up in Brazil, I've faced many social and economic challenges — from unequal access to education to the struggle of surviving as an independent lawyer in a flawed and competitive system. Although I am passionate about Law and currently practise Social Security, Consumer, and Family Law, I've reached a point where I know I cannot achieve my full potential here. I dream of building a more stable, fulfilling life, both for myself and my family.

My goal now is to requalify and practise Law in the United Kingdom. After visiting England in 2023, I felt a deep emotional and almost spiritual connection with the country. It awakened a certainty that I belonged there. Since then, I've been actively pursuing opportunities — especially trainee contracts that accept international candidates. I know the path will be challenging, but I'm ready to start over, embrace change, and dedicate myself fully. I believe this step will not only transform my career, but also allow me to live — not just survive — and help provide a better future for the people I love.

Since childhood, I've imagined countless futures and explored many interests before finding my true calling in Law. At five, I believed I was a witch waiting for my Hogwarts letter. Later, I considered becoming a veterinarian, teacher, archaeologist, and even a psychiatrist — each choice reflecting my curiosity and desire to understand the world. But none of those paths felt right.

As I progressed in school, I noticed my natural skills in logic, argumentation, and structured thinking, which led me to Law. What truly drew me in wasn't just the intellectual challenge, but the way Law silently shapes every aspect of our lives — from public policies to family dynamics. Law only becomes visible when challenged, and it's precisely in these moments that its transformative power emerges.

I believe I am well suited to [REDACTED] because of my resilience, adaptability, and legal experience developed in Brazil — a country marked by complexity, inequality, and a challenging legal environment. Practising law here has sharpened my ability to work independently, think strategically, and find practical solutions under pressure, qualities essential to thrive at a global firm.

My background has prepared me to manage uncertainty and navigate bureaucracy, while also giving me a strong sense of social responsibility. I'm especially drawn to cross-border work, dispute resolution, and regulatory matters — areas where I believe my comparative legal insight can add value.

What attracts me most to [REDACTED] is its integrated global platform, commitment to innovation and diversity, and strong presence across five continents. While the firm has an office in São Paulo, I chose to apply to London, seeking to immerse myself in the common law system and grow in a dynamic, multicultural legal market.

I admire the firm's openness to non-traditional paths and see [REDACTED] not just as a place to work, but as a place to belong, grow, and contribute meaningfully on an international scale.
